

EXCLUSIVE: MANY HAPPY RETURNS FOR STAR LOVERS

JOY FOR JADE

BIG Brother star Jade Goody is back with the father of her two sons, Jeff Brazier.

The couple decided to give their relationship another go after a series of heart-to-heart chats.

And Jeff, 25, is set to move back into Jade's Essex home within days.

A source close to the couple, right, said: "Jade has never stopped loving Jeff. She is so happy - they both are."

"But they wanted to be sure that it would work out this time so they've been taking things quite slowly."

"It has confirmed what we all knew - that they are made for each other."

"Who knows? This time they might even make it up the aisle." Jade, 24, split with footballer Ryan Amoo, 22, in July after a six-month relationship.

The Daily Star Sunday exclusively revealed how Jeff called time on his affair with model Jacqui Adams, 23, to be there for his ex-lover.

Salon

And while Jade was launching her reality TV beauty salon Ugly's, Jeff took care of their sons Bobby-Jack, two, and Freddie, one.

The source said: "It brought them together. It is like they have fallen in love all over again."

Bongo boobs

DOLLY Parton keeps bongo stands at home - not to hold the drums but to rest her huge, double-D boobs on!

She says: "Sometimes they get so heavy they hurt. Resting them on the bongo stands helps to ease the pain."

Country legend Dolly, 59, who is famous for her 40-20-36 figure, has been warned by doctors that her massive assets are putting intolerable strain on her back.

But she insists: "I won't be having them surgically scaled down. I've had back problems but they are getting better."

...and Sadie

SADIE Frost and toyboy Jackson Scott are an item again after he rushed to her side when the star was struck down by a mystery illness.

The couple, above, split three months ago after a series of bust-ups.

But yesterday pals of the pair revealed they were back together. And it's claimed fears over the actress-turned-fashion designer's health led them to fall in love again.

Pals say her weight has plummeted. And doctors have been unable to diagnose her condition, although she is awaiting test results. Sadie, 38, has also turned her back on the party set in London's Primrose Hill to spend more "quiet time" with the 24-year-old guitarist.

One pal added: "Sadie's having a tough time and she's needed people she can trust around her."

The star and ex-hubby Jude Law, 32, have also been in constant contact.

They even enjoyed a rare family day out with kids Rafferty, nine, Iris, four, and Rudy, three, last month.

RAIL BOOZE BAN BID HAMMERED BY THIRSTY TRAVELLERS

ON THE RUN: Thompson

Court out by a killer

A DOUBLE murderer posed as a court official to walk free from Death Row. Charles Victor Thompson got a change of clothes and used a fake ID to get past a security gate and walk out of jail.

Thompson, 35, of Tombhill, Texas, was awaiting the death penalty after he was convicted of killing his ex-girlfriend Dennise Hayslip, 39, and her boyfriend Darren Keith Cain, 30, in 1998.

He also drew up a hit list of people he wanted to kill, like Hayslip's brother, who is now in hiding.

Escaped

A spokesman at Harris County Jail in Houston said: "His ID was convincing and a deputy let him out."

Scottish police are hunting a teenage thug who fled jail by posing as his twin.

Gary O'Donnell, 17, from Glasgow, was serving four-and-a-half years for assault when he escaped from Polmont Young Offenders Institution in Strathguskar.

He left his cell when prison staff called the name of his identical twin, John, due to be freed after serving 60 days for traffic offences in the same block. John was later freed.

Play it again...

TERRESTRIAL TV viewers are being fed a diet of more and more repeats, says home entertainment giant Blockbuster.

UK spokesman Steve Napleton said the main TV channels are premiering fewer recent films.

Instead, they are relying on repeats of 40 and 50-year-old movies to prop up their schedules.

According to the rental giant's research, the five main TV channels air on average 48 movies a week.

But only half-a-dozen are not repeats.

Napleton said: "We are surprised TV bosses are still repeating films that pre-date the last world war."

Recent offerings include Our Relations (1936) and Billy The Kid (1941).

HANDEL ON CRIME

CLASSICAL music is soothing Harrow bus station in Middlesex. Since the piped music was brought in crime has fallen nearly a quarter.

TRAVELLERS were left crying in their drinks last week over plans to ban booze on public transport.

Thousands of passengers enjoy having a drink on the train.

But the Government wants to call time on the great British tradition of having a beer from the buffet car.

Daily Star Sunday reporter DOMINIK LEMANSKI bought a rail ticket - and lager. And he found that passengers are in revolt at the prospect of travelling without a tippie...

ARMED with my pack of Stella, I boarded the 6pm train from London's Kings Cross to Glasgow.

And once on board I was far from out of place among the boozing passengers.

Up and down the packed carriages people were raising a glass of their favourite tippie.

The beer, wine and spirits were flowing freely.

Relax

Becky Smith was happy to join me in a drink.

She was already busy tucking into red wine and cans of lager with her pals.

The proposed booze ban didn't go down well with her.

The 24-year-old, from Berwick, Northumberland, stormed: "B*locks to the Government."

"We are just enjoying a drink, we are not rowdy and we are not harming anyone."

"The Government should learn to let its hair down a little and relax like the rest of us."

Fellow passenger, Tony Crane, 39, a shop manager from York, agreed.

He said: "It's yet another case of the nanny state."

"What's next? A ban on breathing?"

"It's a long journey from

All aboard for the six-pack special

London to York, so I often have a beer or two. I think it's part of British culture.

"If you can't have a drink and a sing-song on the train then we might as well go and live in North Korea."

"They are trying to take away our freedoms."

Barrister Martin Fitzgerald, 44, from Newcastle, added: "I think people should be allowed to do what they want as long as they don't take the p*ss."

As the train made its way through Peterborough, Newark,

Doncaster, York and Newcastle travellers clutching drinks came and went.

And by 10pm in Newcastle some, including myself, were... ahem "refreshed".

But there wasn't a hint of trouble.

Frisky

And it's not just the passengers who enjoy the benefits of drinking on the journey.

One of the train staff I spoke to reckons it's a brilliant way to meet women.

He said: "I always ask to work on the trolley dishing out the booze. I never have any trouble from the drinkers and it's a great way to meet the lasses."

"The other week I was serving a couple of blondes and one of them bent over and pinched my bum."

"For a moment I thought I was going to leave the trolley and end up going home with her."

Another member of staff added: "Sometimes a couple travelling a fair distance have a few bevvies and end up getting a bit frisky."

"If I see a girl ducking under a blanket I can normally guess what's going on and it's not sleeping."

"We often get people getting stuck into booze expecting to get off at Doncaster."

"But they end up waking up sozzled in Glasgow."

"Now that's a difficult one to have to explain to the wife."

As we pulled, tired but merrily, into Glasgow Central at 11.30pm - bang on time - he gave me one last message for the Government.

"Tell them to stick their plan. It's good fun on the trains when the booze is flowing." Cheers!

REFRESHED: Dom enjoys the journey

YOU'RE DOOMED!

A REVOLUTIONARY new movie in which fans see the violent action through the eyes of the hero is set to hit Britain.

Shoot 'em up flick Doom, out in the UK later this month, features a six-minute sequence shot in computer game first-person style.

The £50million film, a big-screen version of the computer game classic, stars former wrestler The Rock.

Now, after it shot to No.1 at the US box office, Hollywood bosses want to make whole movies in the same style.

And The Rock - real name Dwayne Johnson - says the gory scene could eventually see stars like him redundant. He said:

"It's an amazing scene. It's certainly going to change the way things are done in Hollywood."

Fate

"The first person shooter sequence was written in there and I just thought, 'Wow!'"

The Rock plays Sarge, head of a unit of US Space Marines sent to investigate the fate of scientists at a research station on Mars.

But he admitted he almost vomited the first time he played the Doom computer game ten years ago.

He said: "It pioneered the video game industry. It was the first time where you were able to play as a first-person shooter, where the player's on-screen view of the game simulated the character's world."

"If you're not used to it you can get nauseous, so I was one of those guys who got sick playing the game."

Brums in bum deal

SCOTS lasses have the worst boobs and Brummy bums are the most bulbous, says a new survey.

Latino lovely J.Lo is said to have insured her curvy butt for more than £500 million but Midlands girls wouldn't fork out 50p to insure theirs.

And Welsh women reckon they have the best boobs.

Surprisingly, the AA Insurance survey of 2,000 Brits revealed women are being left behind - more men than women are prepared to insure their bottoms.

Croco-doll Jo

BLONDE beauty Joanna Krupa certainly looks tasty here but she once feared she was going to be a titbit for crocodiles. The 23-year-old Planet Of The Apes actress was thrust into a pit full of crocs for a magazine feature on Aussie hunter Steve Irwin. Luckily she survived and you can see more sexy snaps of Joanna in the December issue of FHM.

The must-have Festive toys that drove children wild

DEAR SANTA

ROBORAPTOR?

A VIOLENT dinosaur, a sulky gremlin and a demented frog are battling it out to be top of Santa's most wanted list this year. And with Christmas just 49 days away, retailers are bracing themselves for the annual scramble to snap up this year's must-have kids' present.

Experts are tipping the £89.99 Roboraptor to be the target of this year's stampede.

Following on from last year's top-selling Robosapien, a rapping and farting robot, the new prehistoric pet has three switchable moods – hunter, cautious and playful.

A new £39.99 version of Nineties favourite The Furby is also planning a full-frontal assault on harassed parents' wafer-thin patience.

But mum and dad may not be too disappointed if supplies of another hotly-tipped gift run out long before December.

The much-hated Crazy Frog has been transformed into a £11.99 robotic toy, which can belt out its toe-curling ringtones for the entire festive period.

Meanwhile, ANDY LEA has hunted down the toys that have caused yuletide mayhem over the past 25 years...

1994
POWER RANGERS

A CHEAP Japanese superhero series was a shock hit and by Christmas 1994 sales of the spin-off figures had hit £170million in the US alone.

In the UK, huge queues formed outside stores after Toys 'R' Us limited them to one superhero per customer.

RUBIK'S CUBE

THIS perplexing toy took the nation by storm in 1981. An amazing 100 million cubes were shifted in the UK and US alone. The idea was simple – just get the coloured squares to match up on each side. But it was hair-tearingly tricky.

The cubes were so popular that among the best-selling books that Christmas was a paperback showing ways of solving the puzzle written by Patrick Bossert, a 12-year-old British schoolboy.

NINTENDO GAMEBOY

THE first Nintendo GameBoy portable video game console was black and white with a tiny memory.

But it was a huge hit with yuppies, teens and kids alike.

Sales, reached 32million in 1990 alone and were helped by the addictive puzzle game Tetris, created by Russian mathematician Alexei Pajitnov.

The 49-year-old finally became a millionaire only this year after winning a court battle over royalty rights for the game.

CABBAGE PATCH KIDS

INVENTED by Xavier "Happy" Roberts in Georgia in 1976, each fat-faced doll came with a birth certificate and was offered for adoption rather than for sale.

He sold as many as he could make – 2.8million of them in 1983 – before shortages sent kids and parents into a frenzy. By Christmas 1984, demand was at fever pitch with desperate Yanks even flying to the UK to trawl our toy shops.

Thousands also answered US newspaper ads offering a "A Cabbage Patch For £20" – and received packets of cabbage seeds.

TRANSFORMERS

AS the catchy jingle said, these machines really were "robots in disguise".

They were a huge hit in the US, with reports of a mother trampled to death in a rush at a toy shop in Virginia.

They became the top-seller here after a cartoon based on the characters was a hit on morning TV.

Today the popular TV ad for Citroen cars cheekily pays homage to the toy.

1990
TEENAGE MUTANT NINJA TURTLES

THE four sewer-dwelling, kung fu amphibians became a monster hit with Brit kids.

But stores began running out of the pizza-munching heroes and by Christmas there were long queues outside hundreds of toy shops.

Six years later pet terrapins, bought during the craze and dumped when they grew alarmingly big, began turning up in sewers across Britain.

A group were even caught savaging wild birds at a nature reserve in Cornwall.

REPEATS of the 1960s Thunderbirds TV show began airing in 1991 but it wasn't until Christmas the following year that the toys reached the shops.

Supplies of the new Tracy Island electronic playset sold out within days. Demand was so huge that BBC kids' favourite Blue Peter showed how to make a Tracy Island out of toilet rolls and yoghurt pots. The show was then swamped with more than 98,000 written requests for the printed instructions.

BUZZ LIGHTYEAR

THE makers vastly under-estimated demand for the Buzz Lightyear model – and it cost them $50million in lost sales.

Cars were abandoned in London's Regent Street when word spread that a store had had a last-minute shipment.

Parents who missed out were in good company – even US President Bill Clinton couldn't get his hands on one.

1997
TELETUBBIES

TINKY Winky, Dipsy, Laa-Laa and Po lost out to the Spice Girls in the race for the Christmas No.1 with their single Eh Oh but they were still a huge hit in the toy shops.

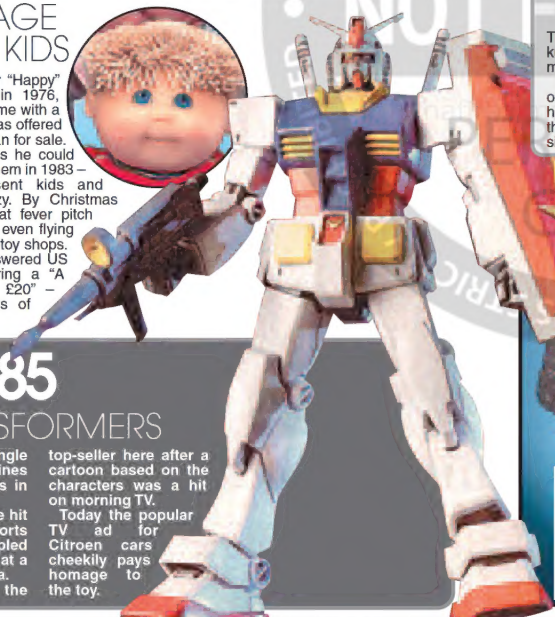

There were queues and rationing in Mothercare and one mum and granny were charged with assault after trying to snatch dolls from a customer's trolley in Toys 'R' Us.

THE FURBY

THE interactive "pet" took the market by storm – until maddened parents realised it didn't have an off button.

The talking toy was even banned from the Pentagon and the White House when makers claimed they could "actively learn".

Security men put staff on Furby Alert, fearing the loose-lipped alien could reveal state secrets.

MOTT

MICHELLE McManus has apparently 1) Lost eight stone; 2) Given up music; and 3) Said she wants a body like Rachel Stevens.
1) Where's that 8st now?
2) Good.
3) We ALL want Rachel's body, love.

SHOT

JUSTIN Timberlake has a crop of 20 new songs written and ready for release. He said: "It moves in a different direction than the last record. I'm really happy with that." So let's keep fingers crossed that the new album is out the same time as Kevin Federline's abysmal rap tune. Won't Britney feel sick then?

Robbie's old pipe dream

MR SLIPPERS YEARNs TO PUFF

CHRIS Martin's love of yoga was to blame for Coldplay's MTV troubles. The band were at odds ahead of the show as several of the lads fancied letting their hair down a little at the pre-show parties. After a row they split into two camps, with Chris and Johnny Buckland heading off. Chris told a pal: "I find all of that a bit dull, so I spent a lot of time in my room doing yoga to alleviate the boredom." Chris gets the thumbs up on one thing though - his big hair. We're both sporting swollen barnets at the moment. Girls love it, I tell you.

ROBBIE Williams is on the hunt for a decent pipe and a fireplace to smoke it by.

Already boasting about his favourite slippers and boring lifestyle, Rob, 31, is also cultivating a range of dressing gowns and smoking jackets. Yes, Robbie is keen to embrace an early old age with a good book and a warm hearth. During the MTV Europe Music Awards in Lisbon, Rob got chatting with Foo Fighters man Nate Mendel. He told him: "I've got this properly comfortable chair I sit in in Los Angeles and I'm looking for a smoking jacket or something to finish off the look. I might even go for one of those old bloke's pipes to puff on if I can find one." Earlier in the evening, he'd admitted to wearing his favourite slippers everywhere - even on stage. He said: "I'm really boring. That's why there's not a reality TV show about me, because nothing happens." "I suppose reaching 30 means that small stuff doesn't stress me out."

Charm

As I told you last month, Rob's even replaced his former vices of booze and drugs with the less physically punishing high of Scrabble.

But joking aside, Rob was a star in Portugal. I see him in a new light. Despite hating the press, he came backstage after collecting his Best Male gong and answered questions intelligently and with charm and wit. There was no showing off, posturing or embarrassing attempts to address politics. His maturity has made me a fan of the man... if not the music. And comfortable slippers are like a slim woman with big ones - always pleasing.

MOTT RESPECT: The Rob

★ WILL Young is set to record a song by The Smiths for Christmas. And here's where I take my life into my own hands by angering Will and Morrissey fans. These are two groups only mildly less militant than al-Qaida.
★ I hate Morrissey with a passion which sometimes frightens me - and if Will does cover Heaven Knows I'm Miserable Now, I'll be forced to slate him.
★ Radio 2 want him to do a tune for them for Crimble and his publicist suggested The Smiths tune.
★ Morrissey and Will fans can now unite to bombard me with hate mail.

TIM Kash, left, has been officially welcomed into the Swordsman Club. The MTV lad had a successful evening of social lady sport after the awards with a choice of two quiet but fit girls or one not-so-fit but obviously up-for-it lass. But instead of sticking at 16, he gambled, got 21 and watched the sun rise with Pussycat Doll Nicole Scherzinger. I'm told: "They hooked up at about 4am. 'Who knows how far they went?' 'However, they had breakfast on Friday morning and swapped phone numbers.' Kash machine!

HEIDI HI JINKS...

HEIDI Range pulled a classic stunt on her flight home from Lisbon. She'd taken a mate out with her, but said mate was sat in economy rather than Club Class on the flight back with the Sugababe. I'm told: "She told the stewardess she was terrified of flying and needed to have her friend with her." "The stewardess fell for it and gave her mate a full upgrade." "As she sat down, the pair shared a triumphant wink." I'll try that one myself next time, Heidi.

LUCIE SILVAS - London Queen Elizabeth Hall LUCIE has got a great voice, but live she's one dodgy perm short of a Jane McDonald cruise show. It's probably down to all the American power ballads. When her delightful pins emerge from under the piano, she's way more appealing, particularly for the quieter, acoustic moments like upcoming single Forget Me Not and a surprisingly tender cover of Metallica's Nothing Else Matters.

CAUGHT LIVE

JAMES CABOOTER

SHERYL CROW - London Hammersmith Apollo HAS Sheryl Crow secretly got hitched to lover Lance Armstrong? Wearing a bridal gown on stage, she announced: "I was so excited about playing London. I decided to wear my wedding dress." Her string section added elegant flourishes to her trademark Americana, but the show lacked oomph. Like the 30-something audience, it was polite, professional, well-mannered and about as edgy as a bridge club annual general meeting.

Spotter of bother for Junkie FC

EXCLUSIVE
by DOMINIK LEMANSKI

THE ex-junkie football boss who inspired the cult drug movie Trainspotting claims his team has been snubbed by the Government.

Former heroin addict David Bryce started Glasgow-based side Calton Athletic after kicking drink and drugs in 1985.

The team featured in the hit 1996 movie and David's violent drug-fuelled experiences were the basis for a series of famous scenes and characters. But in his new book Alive And Kicking, he has blasted the Government for refusing to give the team any funding.

The club helps recovering addicts beat drugs by going cold turkey as opposed to methadone treatment. But Government chiefs refuse to hand over cash because they don't approve.

Trainspotting director Danny Boyle and writers Irvine Welsh and John Hodge were so grateful for David's help they gave £400,000 from the box office profits. A Trainspotting team also took on David's side to raise money in 1997.

Policy

David, 56, said: "Labour's policy of stabilising drug addicts has not worked. You cannot wean people off drugs with methadone. You need total abstinence. This is how we help people."

"More than 3,500 have come through our doors and got help with addiction. The problem is we have been cut off by the Government and receive no funding because they are sceptical."

David was chief technical advisor on Trainspotting.

He recalled: "I got involved in Trainspotting because the director Danny Boyle and lead actor Ewan McGregor were having trouble."

"I helped show them what cold turkey was like. I had a horrendous time, vomiting liquid poison that kept coming up for hours. I didn't even have the strength to crawl to the toilet."

Besides McGregor, who played junkie Mark Renton, and Robert Carlyle, as psycho Begbie, the film also featured Jonny Lee Miller as "Sickboy".

● Alive And Kicking by David Bryce, published by Mainstream, is available in paperback for £9.99.

CORRIE ON UP THE JUNGLE

Street Sean a Celeb

PURR-FECT: Atomic Kitten Jenny Frost, snapped here promoting the Breakthrough Breast Cancer charity

EXCLUSIVE by MARK JEFFERIES and PETER DYKE

CORRIE star Sean Wilson will swap the cobbles of Weatherfield for the jungle trail after signing up for I'm A Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here!

The 40-year-old, who plays male nurse Martin Platt, will join Backstreet Boy Nick Carter and sexy Atomic Kitten Jenny Frost Down Under.

Sean is about to bow out of the Street and I'm A Celeb bosses are delighted he's agreed to take part.

A source said: "Sean is a household name who's had some fantastic storylines in the Street."

"But not many people know the real man - they only know him as Martin, Gail's ex-husband."

"Now viewers will get to see more about the actor who's been on the soap for more than 15 years."

Babes

Meanwhile, singer Nick, 25, is purring over the chance of getting together with a sexy Kitten.

He's told pals he's got his eye on Jenny, 27, who's engaged to 42-year-old DJ Dominic Thripp.

A source said: "He checked out that there were some sexy babes going in the jungle with him before signing up."

"Jenny really caught his eye. But he'll have to get past Dominic first!"

Sean, Nick and Jenny will jet Down Under soon for the new series which starts on November 20.

Among those tipped to join them are Margaret Thatcher's daughter Carol, 52, Bargain Hunt host David

He-man Dan tops BB Bill

HUNKY Daniel McPherson is set to top The Bill on Celebrity Big Brother.

The Aussie, 24, who played Sun Hill's PC Cameron Tait before leaving the police soap last year, has been in secret talks about entering the BB house.

Bosses reckon Daniel, inset, a former triathlete champion who also starred as Joel in Neighbours, will pull in millions of female viewers.

Also being lined up is former That's Life host Esther Rantzen, 65. A source said: "Esther is a tough cookie who won't suffer fools gladly."

"She is hugely popular with the public and will certainly attract viewers."

Big Brother host Davina McCall, 37, is rumoured to be hoping to step inside the house - this time as a contestant.

Anna Nicole Smith, also 37, has already been signed up. The new 16-day series starts on Channel 4 on January 5.

Forget Pete & Shaun,

WHITE LINES: Druggie Pete Doherty's the latest big name to sign up to the notorious Gio-Goi fashion label

IT'S the trendy fashion label all the bad boy rockers want to swagger in.

Druggie singer Pete Doherty is a huge fan, as is Robbie Williams - both of whom have been signed up to plug the clothes.

But what followers of Gio-Goi won't know is that founders Chris and Anthony Donnelly boast pasts that make Doherty look like a naughty school lad.

The brothers, from a notorious Manchester family, were even considered gangsters in the 90s.

A police source told us: "The Donnellys were extremely well-known in Manchester and put under surveillance because of their activities."

Rave

The brothers built their name in the late 1980s when they helped set up the city's illegal rave scene which earned its "Madchester" tag.

They formed Gio-Goi after spotting a niche in the market for "street wear" for fans of bands like the Happy Mondays, Stone Roses and New Order.

Worn by the Roses' Ian Brown, Happy Mondays' frontman Shaun Ryder and a string of top DJs it became THE label to be seen in.

And the profits they got out of it were soon being ploughed into their own nightclub - Manchester's Parliament.

Chris, 37, explained: "The nightclub and the fashion business were generating a lot of money."

"And with the people surrounding us at that particular time it must have looked like we were up to all sorts."

"It didn't help that we were brought up in a family that was notorious in the area."

"We wanted a nice atmosphere in the club but that didn't happen."

"The police were following villains to Parliament and it brought a lot of attention to us, which we didn't want."

Put under surveillance by detectives, the brothers were arrested in 1994 after armed raids on their homes.

Anthony, now 40, was charged with conspiracy to supply drugs, Chris was accused of supplying heroin, and their scrap dealer dad Arthur, 63, faced six counts of conspiracy to supply drugs.

All the charges were dropped, apart from one against Anthony, which saw him serve six months in Manchester's notorious Strangeways jail.

The damage to their business was done, though, and the company accounts were frozen. Chris said: "Anthony was in prison and no one would give us credit because they thought, with our gangster reputation, if we decided not to pay them there was nothing they could do."

Their business faltered and eventually closed in 1996, although Oasis front man Liam Gallagher and Blur's Damon Albarn continued to wear the gear.

Finally, after regaining control of their accounts, the pair tried to re-start the company in 2000.

Battle

But they soon ran into trouble from the multi-million pound might of fashion giant Giorgio Armani who was furious over similarities between the labels' names.

It was only earlier this year after a long-running legal battle that they got the okay to start trading again. But it came at a cost - with the brothers paying out an undisclosed amount of cash to relaunch their fashion brand.

With the pop world's interest in the label it shouldn't take long for them to recoup their money...and millions more.

Last week it was revealed that the label had signed up both Doherty, 26, and recovered bad boy Robbie, 31, to plug their clothes.

And we can exclusively reveal that they have also got Albarn's chart-topping cartoon band Gorillaz and current chart hot property Arctic Monkeys signed up after secret talks.

Chris, now married with kids, keeps the reasons behind the label's name a closely-guarded secret but he sees a big future for their business, despite their rocky past.

He said: "Things are looking really good for us."

"We've got Robbie Williams, Pete Doherty, Gorillaz and a whole load of other names on board."

"It's an exciting future."

Dash for fash cash

FASHION'S made fortunes for plenty of top music stars. Pop queen Madonna has a £6million deal with Versace and also earned £6.2million plugging clothes by US giant Gap with rapper Missy Elliott.

Babe Christina Aguilera also has a Versace deal thought to be worth in excess of £1million.

And the Dirty singer was also paid a six-figure sum to take over from Britney Spears as the face of Skechers trainers.

Brit singing sensation Joss Stone had a £1million deal with Gap, before being replaced by Michelle Williams from Destiny's Child, while many stars have also earned fortunes with their own labels.

Jennifer Lopez rakes in £100million a year with her JLO collection while P. Diddy has earned £78million through his Sean John clobber.

And rapper Damon Dash trousered over £120million with Rocawear, which Victoria Beckham used to plug.

SHOW HOST: McGuinness

Pat's a Bowen winner

FUNNYMAN Patrick McGuinness is following in Jim Bowen's "super-smashing" footsteps after landing his own Channel 4 game show.

The comic, who starred in Peter Kay's TV sitcom Max And Paddy's Road To Nowhere, recorded the pilot for the show, Tough Decisions, last week.

TV bosses are now looking for contestants to take part in a full series.

And Patrick, 32, hopes it will make him as big a host as Bullseye star Jim.

Charm

A show insider said: "Patrick is a big talent and he stood out opposite Peter on Max And Paddy."

"He's got that warm northern charm similar to Jim Bowen."

Patrick said: "It went very, very well."

"We delivered what could be the makings of a bonny new show."

A Channel 4 spokesman said: "Contestants have to second guess what the studio audience thinks is the correct answer to a dilemma with a comical twist. In one instance they have to guess what a celebrity is thinking."

"It's fun and lively and Paddy is the comedy ringmaster."

A smoky break-in

A BURGLAR who tried to cover his crime by setting fire to a house he had broken into died in the blaze.

Wayland Deputee, 23, of Billings, Montana, was overcome by smoke. He was found dead at the scene with rare coins belonging to the home owner in his pocket.

Billings police detective Captain Dave Hinkel said: "There were more belongings in an alley."

"It appears Deputee stashed them there, went back for more and started fires in the kitchen and a bedroom to destroy evidence."

"However, the smoke killed him in the dining room before he could get out again."

Home owner Phil Glaspy was on holiday in Las Vegas at the time.

SWITCH ON

● IT'S the final episode of the fabulous Rock School on Friday (C4, 9.30pm). Already looking forward to the second series.

SWITCH OVER

● CORRIE goes a bit mental on Monday with guns and shoot-outs. It's kinder to avert your eyes from this dodgy double episode (ITV1, 7.30pm and 8.30pm) and don't worry, it all gets better by Wednesday. Try Brad Pitt in Troy over on Sky Movies 2.

Confessions of a snorty girl

THE most riveting telly last week was Danniella Westbrook on EastEnders, Drugs and My New Nose (Monday, C5).

They should play that documentary to every schoolkid in Britain.

It's far more effective than any Government anti-drugs campaign.

Whatever you think of Danniella, you've got to applaud her honesty in making this film. Kate Moss' comeback is already turning into some sort of airbrushed success story of how she's beaten the drugs and is now busy being thin and beautiful in Vanity Fair.

Danniella talked about the moment she heard "a splitting noise, a cracking noise" and her nose finally went after a mammoth snorting session.

That's got to be one of the vilest, yet most powerful interviews shown on TV.

Spoilt

Personally, I've always had Danniella down as a little slapper who was so desperate to fund her drug habit during pregnancy she rang the papers to sell them the short list of who she thought the father could be.

In I'm A Celebrity... she came over as a spoilt brat and I got pig sick of reading about how she was proud to be clean and how she and her inflated breasts were enjoying a fabulous sex life.

But she's clawed back some respect for at least being honest about what drugs did to her - instead of swanning about in a bikini like Moss.

She told how she dragged her three-year-old son Kai off to live in a dodgy flat where he would revive her from cocaine-induced fits by feeding her chocolate.

She admitted how she threatened her mother's life, lied through her teeth to bosses and family and disgusted her co-stars like Mike Reid, who got sick of watching her buy a

■ SNIFF AND THE TEARS: Danniella Westbrook has won back respect for being honest about what drugs have done to her teacup full of coke a day and "shove it up her bugle".

It was a sad, sordid desperate story - made all the more sickening with all those images of surgeons trying their best to repair her ravaged face.

Talking about herself, she stated: "If you were to say three things about Danniella, they'd say, 'She's a cokehead. She used to be in EastEnders and she's the girl with no nose'."

Yep. No nose and no career was pretty much how I'd sum her up.

But I used to have no respect for her either - and she's at least reclaimed a bit of that after this piece of confessional TV.

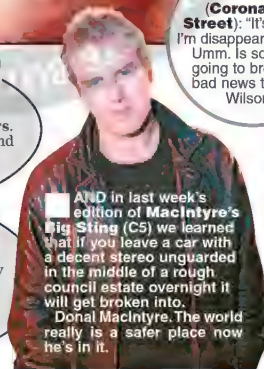

TV TURN-OFF

● PHIL'S wimpy punches in EastEnders. Come on, man, pull yourself together and wade in like a proper Mitchell.

TV TURN-ON

● PAULA Tilbrook as the fabulous Betty in Emmerdale. And what a great tribute to Stan Richards last week's scenes were.

● COUNTDOWN. OK, so Des needs to relax a bit, but it's nice to have it back.

MARTIN Platt (Coronation Street): "It's not like I'm disappearing, is it?" Umm. Is someone going to break the bad news to Sean Wilson?

■ IF The X Factor lot think they have it tough I hope they caught Rock School's 13-year-old Camilla nervously telling Motörhead backstage at their Hammersmith Apollo gig: "We will do our best. Whether we get bottled or whatever..."

Blancheism of the week

Audrey (as the bridal party leg it out of the church and into their stretch limo): "Are they trying to set some sort of record?"

Norris: "Must be the most morons in a car." Blanche: "Try and squeeze yourself in. Immobilise yourself."

■ SLIGHTLY concerned that this ITV4 thing is targeted at blokes. With David Letterman, Kojak and rubbish documentaries about William Shatner it's my idea of a perfect night in. I'm not one of the bird things that Paul Ross bangs on about, am I?

Quote of the week

She didn't get it done in my salon

DMC RAPPER 'WAS A DRUGS MULE'

MURDERED rapper Jam Master Jay's family are fighting claims he was a gangland drug runner.

The Run DMC star's relatives plan a legal battle against writer Ethan Brown, who says Jay was so broke he became a "cocaine mule" to finance his recordings.

Brown alleges Jay ferried the coke from a distributor in Baltimore to New York street dealers for years.

"By the mid-90s, Jay had become so desperate he was driving two or three kilos a time along Interstate 95," he writes in Queens Reign Supreme: Fat Cat, 50 Cent, And The Rise Of The Hip-Hop Hustler. The

He was shot in the head at point-blank range in a recording studio in New York's Queens in 2002.

Family spokesman Fern Yates said: "The drug running story's totally untrue. Police told us they investigated it and found it was false."

But author Brown declared: "My source also worked for the drug dealer who hired Jay."

RACY Rosario Dawson has no trouble paying her rent after becoming Hollywood's raunchiest star.

The 26-year-old made her name romping with Colin Farrell in Alexander and playing a hooker in Sin City.

Now she's starring as an S&M bondage queen in the movie version of Broadway rock musical Rent, above.

Amazingly, the New York-born babe struggled with shyness early in her career. She reckons it was due to being bullied as a child because she looked like a boy.

Rosario said: "I was made fun of for being flat-chested and skinny."

"My mom would come to school and say, 'If you don't respect my daughter, I'll smack your mother and she'll smack you'. And these kids would walk up to me and say, 'I'm sorry, we won't do it again'."

FEARS FOR JAMIE OVER BLACK-OUT

Star woke in pool of blood

THE EYES HAVE IT: Jamie sports his shiner

EXCLUSIVE by ANDREW THRELFALL & EMMA SHANKLAND

JAMIE Oliver is nervously awaiting the results of a medical...to find out why he mysteriously blacked out at home.

The 30-year-old set tongues wagging last month when he appeared in public sporting a black eye.

Now, in an exclusive interview, the hard-working TV chef admits he was worried enough to visit his doctor to check out what the problem might be. It was just days before he appeared at the National TV awards that he woke in a pool of blood on his bathroom floor after blacking out.

Asked what happened he told us: "I'm just not sure. I passed out and I don't know why."

"I woke up on the bathroom floor in a pile of claret. It's weird."

"I tried to put on some make-up before the awards but it still looked a bit of a mess."

Hectic

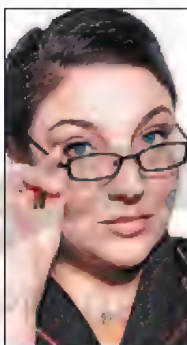

Sources close to the star, who won two awards at the bash, say he may need more tests depending on what the medical reveals.

And his pals are worried that his hectic lifestyle could be a major reason for the black-out.

He managed to complete two energy-sapping Channel 4 TV series in just six months - Jamie's School Dinners and Jamie's Great Escape, which is on screen now.

And his stress levels must have soared last week when it emerged that trainees at his Fifteen restaurant had been using drugs to help cope with their workload.

Oliver, who launched the North London eatery to give disadvantaged kids a career chance, is now having to organise a cannabis treatment course for them.

FAVOURITE: Jo Frost

In the middle of all this he tries to spend as much time as possible with his young family - wife Jools, 29, and kids Poppy, three, and Daisy, two.

Now friends are scared that unless he slows down he may ruin his health for good.

One said: "He's really worried about what happened."

"There are fears the tests could reveal something serious."

"Imagine if he blacked out while riding his scooter..."

Special

Jamie had a welcome distraction at the TV awards when he picked up the gong for the most popular factual programme for his controversial school dinners show.

He also collected a special recognition award which he insisted should have gone to buxom kiddie controller from Supernanny, Jo Frost.

"She's fantastic," he said. "And it was amazing to hear my old man say, 'my son Jamie Oliver...' over the PA system in the Albert Hall."

"It was very emotional. I shed a lot of tears - and I don't cry easily."

NEIL SEAN'S THE BIZ

HE KNOWS WHAT THE STARS ARE UP TO

ULTIMATE diva SHIRLEY BASSEY has drawn up a list of must-haves for a TV special next year - and Robbie Williams is at the top. She gushed: "He must be there - he has it in spades."

Yellow peril...

COLD Feet star JAMES NESBITT is terrified he'll always be better known for his ads than his acting. The Irish star moaned: "More than anything I get asked to sign copies of the Yellow Pages. It'll be the one thing I'm remembered for at this rate."

SISTERS NIC and NAT APPLETON might have moved on from All Saints but apparently their fans haven't. They said: "We were never about teens but about empowered women and we've been asked so many times when we're coming back by fans that miss us that we thought, why not?"

OOPS...BRAD PITT might be playing happy families with the gorgeous ANGELINA JOLIE but his fans from home are less than pleased with his new life. In a US poll he was recently voted "America's Worst Liar and Cheater".

'Hampstead' Heath

GOOD news, girls. Aussie-turned-Hollywood hunk HEATH LEDGER has fallen in love with London and is on the look-out for a city pad. He told me: "It's the coolest city in the world so buying here can only be an investment."

FAR from being jealous of ex-wife DEMI MOORE's new hubby - the young and gorgeous ASHTON KUTCHER - hard man BRUCE WILLIS is on the hunt for scripts so they can star in a movie together. He told my mate: "I just did a show with the guy. He's a truly gifted actor so we're looking at other on-screen options."

PETER ANDRE has revealed he is "too happy" for the charts at the moment. Jordan's new hubby told me: "The charts are crowded with a lot of angst right now. I could land a number one if I started warbling about lost love but I'm into happy music so I'm having a break."

AFTER a string of lucrative talks regarding the British chat show circuit, convicted rapist MIKE TYSON is demanding that an entire Parkinson show is devoted to him. His UK team told me: "We're in talks but he has so much to say we want the whole show." Who cares? No one who would say it to his face!

Violence of the lambs

JAMIE is bracing himself for a storm of criticism from animal lovers this week - after TV fans see him kill a lamb by slitting its throat.

In his Channel 4 show, Jamie's Great Escape, the chef travels to the mountains of Italy's Le Marche region where he learns from locals how to make a traditional meat sauce.

However, this also includes being shown how to kill and butcher a lamb with a knife.

A show source said: "The locals think nothing of putting a knife to the throat of a lamb. But Jamie struggled to cut the throat and needed help from someone used to doing it all the time."

Jamie's Great Escape is on Wednesday night at 8.30pm.

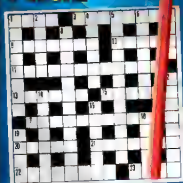

SLAUGHTER: Help for Jamie

THE KRANKIES were furious about being left out of the recent ITV 50th birthday celebrations after producing "TV hit after TV hit" through their careers. They told me: "Despite our success we weren't even shown during, or invited to, the celebrations - all we got was an offer for I'm A Celebrity. We turned it down."

BLACK Eyed Peas diva FERGIE was horrified by claims made on US radio that she has been "imaginative about her age" and had facial surgery to look younger than her years. She says: "It's all me. I'm completely natural!"

Lost orders for spoilt Shannon

CRASHING OUT: Sexy Shannon, played by Maggie Grace, is sure to be missed by Lost fans

LOST beauty Maggie Grace is the first big-name star of the TV hit to be axed.

Her character, spoilt Shannon Rutherford, will be gunned down in a bitchy beach battle with a fellow plane crash survivor.

American TV viewers will see her die on Wednesday when she clashes with newcomer Ana-Lucia Cortez.

An insider on Hawaiian island Oahu, where the second series of Lost is being filmed, said: "It's one of the most shocking and dramatic TV moments in years."

(Michelle Rodriguez) after they become rivals for the love of Iraqi Sayid (Naveen Andrews).

The source said: "Fans will be shocked because Shannon has become a firm favourite."

"She initially came across as a self-centred user but her romance with Sayid has put her firmly in viewers' hearts."

"In the episode in which she dies, she'll become an even more sympathetic figure after it is revealed how the death of her father in a car accident tore her life apart."

Revolt

"Even the other cast members were crying when she spat out her final lines."

Maggie, 22, recently told how the hit show's producers had warned of "instant executions" of characters after a pay revolt by the cast.

She said: "You only get 24 hours' notice if you're being written out. It's brutal. Everyone's in fear."

The insider revealed: "Maggie bawled her eyes out when she realised she was the first to be hit."

Her exit will be seen in Britain next year.

TV rap on DNA testing

TV CHAT show DNA tests should be stopped, say scientists.

They've hit out at programmes like ITV's Jerry Springer where couples can find out who's the daddy live on air.

The team at Britain's only DNA clinic say the shows make a mockery of paternity testing and are just "car crash TV".

And they say broadcasting the process to millions of daytime viewers only brings extra heartache.

Cheap

The calls came from Kellie McLoughlin, co-founder of The DNA Clinic, who labelled TV tests "disgusting".

She said: "It's making cheap entertainment out of people's emotions."

"They don't even do the test beforehand and give them the results on the show - they make them wait until the next day so people watch it twice."

Kellie's Liverpool clinic offers tests from £170.

Checks are not available on the NHS or through private health insurance so many couples turn to costly US internet firms.

Opera and dance are more popular with punters in Scotland and the North West of England than anywhere else in the country.

That's despite London being the home of the Royal Opera House and the theatres of the West End.

The survey by Theatre Tokens lays to rest the myth that the North is less cultured than the South.

Spokeswoman Helen Jones said: "London's West End is traditionally the home of so much theatrical tradition, yet the love of theatre remains popular across the country."

Hate mailers try to stop Brady drama

FACES OF EVIL: Brady and Hindley

CAST and crew working on a Moors Murders TV film have been sent death threats.

Feelings are running high over the portrayal of evil killers Myra Hindley and Ian Brady in a two-part ITV drama.

The programme, which follows the story of the sadistic pair, has the backing of the murdered children's families.

But others are outraged that it is being made and have sent hate mail and threats to those involved, including Maxine Peake, who plays Hindley and Sean Harris, who plays Brady.

A Granada TV source said: "Some very angry letters have been sent and death threats have been made."

"The families of the children are behind the series because it is being done very sensitively."

"But there are clearly some people from the area who don't want it all dragged up again." Hindley and

EXCLUSIVE
by SIMON LENNON

Brady were both jailed for life in 1966 for the kidnap and murder of five children in the Manchester area.

The bodies of Pauline Reade, 16, John Kilbride, 12, and Lesley Ann Downey, ten, were recovered from shallow graves on Saddleworth Moor above Oldham.

Buried

The body of 12-year-old Keith Bennett is believed to be buried nearby but has never been found.

That of Edward Evans, 17, was discovered at the couple's home.

Hindley died in prison in 2002, aged 60. Brady, 67, is still in Broadmoor Hospital, where he is on hunger strike.

A source on the drama, See No Evil: The Story Of The Moors Murders, said: "Maxine looks so similar to Hindley it's going to make for uneasy viewing." So far, filming has portrayed the couple enjoying a picnic on Saddleworth Moor with Hindley's sister Maureen and brother-in-law David Smith.

The real trip took place before they began their murder spree.

The producers meticulously researched the drama for two years and the picnic took place in exactly the spot where the real-life killers carved their initials on a rock.

Weird things have been happening on set - fuelling rumours that the drama is cursed.

Power generators have failed, tools have vanished, a crew member's relative died suddenly and a make-up girl fell and twisted her ankle.

A source said: "It's quite scary. People are comparing it to The Omen and The Exorcist."

"It just can't all be coincidence. People are getting really concerned. It's as if the programme is cursed."

The drama will be screened next April to mark the 40th anniversary of the Moors Murders trial.

EastEnders

SHANE Richie shed real tears during heartbreaking scenes for Armistice Day with his dying grandma Nana Moon.

He broke down as his character Alfie Moon fulfilled his grandma's last wish by taking her to visit her war hero husband's grave in France.

The former Queen Vic landlord is already struggling to come to terms with the fact that Nana Moon (Hilda Braid) has a terminal illness.

But as they pay tribute at his grandfather's graveside, Alfie realises how much he will miss her when she's gone.

Shane, 41, said the emotional scenes were the toughest of his career.

Denial

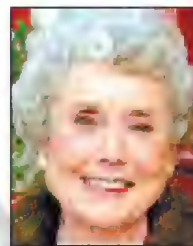

He added: "Alfie takes Nana to France to visit the grave of her war hero husband William.

"He's been going along with her wishes but he's still in denial about the fact that she's dying. But by the end of the trip he finally faces up to it.

"He breaks down and says, 'My nana is dying in front of my eyes and there is nothing I can do about it'.

"It's the first time we actually hear him say it."

He added: "The scenes were very difficult to film and when viewers see Alfie crying they will realise that the tears were real. It's the most emotional stuff I've ever had to do.

LAST WISH: Nana Moon

"He and Nan finally confess how much they are going to miss each other."

Producers will also mark Armistice Day remembering the end of the First World War - and pay tribute to all victims of wars since by dropping the trademark drumbeats from the closing music for the first time.

Grief

Fans of EastEnders, which was crowned Most Popular Drama Series at the National Television Awards, can tune in to the emotional episode on Friday.

Nana Moon eventually dies in Alfie's arms on Christmas Day. Alfie is left suicidal by her death.

And to add to his grief, he finally realises that he and wife Kat (actress Jessie Wallace) will never be able to make another go of their stormy marriage.

But producers are keeping viewers guessing about how Shane will leave Walford after he and Jessie announced their plans to quit the show.

home with mysterious teenager Amber, actress Nikki Patel, whose mum Ravinder has been rushed into hospital.

Kind-hearted Sunita takes her home to collect some belongings and spots a framed snap of her hubby cosy'ing up to Ravinder, played by Mina Anwar. But Dev clams up when quizzed about the picture, so Sunita (actress Shobna Gulati) visits Ravinder's bedside - where she drops the bombshell that Amber is actually Dev's daughter.

And there's worse to come for the troubled beauty when Ravinder lists a string of other shop girls who have children by the Corrie store boss.

Shock

A show insider said: "Dev truly believed he could get away with bringing Amber home. But he clearly underestimated the intelligence of his wife in thinking he could get away with it."

"Sadly for Sunita it turns out to be one shock after another as she discovers the truth."

"After seeing Ravinder she's pointed to another woman named

"When she then reveals that there's another of Dev's shop girls that she should go and see, Sunita totally loses it."

"She really is at breaking point by the end of it all and being pregnant doesn't help either."

"Sunita's life is torn apart and she doesn't know what to do."

Viewers of the ITV1 show can watch as the drama unfolds on November 14.

TROUBLED teen Justin Burton desperately tries to get back into sexy teacher Becca's good books when he is sensationally cleared of murder.

The student, played by hunky heart-throb Chris Fountain, walks free after his trial for stabbing evil bully Macki to death.

The love-struck lad is quick to forget it was blonde Becca who led police to him when he went on the run.

And he vows to make up for the trouble he's caused the married lovely (played by Ali Bastian) in more ways than one.

A show insider said: "Justin fell for Becca from the beginning and some would say his feelings were reciprocated."

"But although she knew he didn't kill Macki, she still called police and got him captured."

"But Justin still loves her. He's grown up in the last few months and Becca certainly gets tempted...but it's too early to say how far they go."

I FIND it disgraceful that the butler and housekeeper who used to work for the Beckhams want to write a tell-all book about the couple.

These people, just like their nanny, were trusted to work in the couple's home and taken completely into their confidence.

I THINK it's a bit rich to blame Guy Ritchie's film failures on his marriage to Madonna.

Before he met her, he was a nobody who had made one mediocre gangster film.

Marrying Madonna got Hollywood's A-list beating down his door for roles in his films. The fact that he has managed to balls up this priceless opportunity by making a string of formulaic dross is nobody's fault but his own.

He should thank his lucky stars that there is at least one person with talent in their relationship.

CRITICAL: Actress Honor

A black 007 for Honor

FORMER Bond girl Honor Blackman says the 007 role should have gone to a black or Asian actor.

Honor, who played Pussy Galore in the 1964 film Goldfinger, criticised the casting of Daniel Craig.

The Chester-born actor, 37, will take over the role of the British spy from Pierce Brosnan who failed to agree new contract terms with producers for Casino Royale which is due to start filming in January.

Honor, 77, said: "It seems strange to have a blond James Bond."

"I would have preferred a black or Asian Bond - I thought it was time."

She added: "Sean Connery was the best Bond without question, followed by Pierce Brosnan."

"Having said that Daniel Craig could be staggeringly brilliant - we'll have to wait and see."

Pet 'tec hired to find £40k pooch

DOGGED: Roy and Diane, who have hired Lee Catt, inset right. Above, Jim Carrey playing Ace Ventura, pet detective in the film

A DESPERATE couple who put up a £40,000 reward to find their stolen dog have turned to a real-life Ace Ventura for help.

Diane Cousins and husband Roy Zirfas, both 55, have called in psychic pet detective Lee Catt to trace their missing pooch Natasha.

The beloved 14-year-old Labrador cross disappeared from their home in Downham, south-east London, in March.

Despite appeals and the offer of the amazing reward, there have been no leads.

Now the devastated pair are hoping Lee, a real life version of the pet detective played by Jim Carrey in the 1994 Ace Ventura film, can tell them where she is.

Diane, a receptionist, said: "I would give my life to get this dog back."

"All of my dogs are special but Natasha had that extra something because she never left my side. Out of desperation, I went to astrologer Russell Grant through his website and he put me in touch with Lee.

"He thinks Natasha got startled when she walked out of the front door and bolted."

Diane has given Lee Natasha's collar to help him get a clearer image of what happened to her.

Image

She added: "It has been seven months but I'm not giving up. I know in my heart of hearts that if I keep going I will get her back."

Lee, 37, who has helped trace missing cats and a dog, believes Natasha is still alive.

He said: "The image in my head is that she came out of the door, turned left and left again, took a couple of other turnings and went down a walkway to a main road."

His perception proved right - Diane spoke to a group of children who said they had seen the dog walk off in the way Lee described.

Lee added: "I need to work out whether the dog was hit and then taken somewhere."

The couple who have five other dogs, raised the £40,000 bounty by selling jewellery and re-mortgaging their home.

It is believed that 50,000 pooches are stolen every year for breeding, selling on or ransom demands.

Movie's Jackass

EXCLUSIVE
by ANDY LEA

■ HEAVENLY Katherine Heigl reckons she went through hell on the set of her new Hollywood movie.

She was constantly terrified she'd become a victim of her wild co-star, Jackass prankster Johnny Knoxville.

They appear together in comedy romp The Ringer in which Johnny, 34, plays a man who fakes disability to get into the Special Olympics.

Katherine, 26, who plays his long-suffering girlfriend, says there was never a dull moment during filming.

But she adds: "Johnny was constantly f---ing with everybody on set. He took a cattle prod to the executive producer's thigh. Of course, he was aiming for something else.

Lucky

"Looking back on it, I'm lucky to be alive having spent so long on a film with Johnny. Anything can happen."

But Katherine escaped in one piece – and flew straight to London to film the comedy flick Caffeine.

And the transatlantic switch proved just the tonic she needed after her "dangerous" stint with Johnny.

She even fell head over heels in love with British blokes. She admits: "I love the accent. It was so much fun to do."

"But I was nervous out of my mind. The British people on the set all had very different
